Revenue over rights?

Or engagement over isolation? Ottawa college slammed for opening men-only campus in Saudi Arabia

DENIS ARMSTRONG
ottawa@metronews.ca

Some faculty at Ottawa's Algonquin College are upset the college opened an overseas campus exclusively for men in Jazan, Saudi Arabia.

They're claiming Algonquin is putting revenues ahead of human rights.

Algonquin is one of 10 community colleges and technical schools from Canada, the U.S. and Europe invited to open schools in Saudi Arabia. And there's more to come. With a student body of 850 in its first year of operations and enrolment expected to rise to 2,500 by Year 3, Algonquin College's Jazan campus revenue is predicted to exceed 100 million riyal, or $25 million, over the next five years. The college hopes to expand the number of courses it offers.

Algonquin lost on its bid to open a school exclusively for women, but has submitted a second bid to for 2014.

"This is apartheid, and any notion of apartheid is unacceptable at Algonquin," said Jack Wilson, vice-president of Ontario Public Service Employees Union who teaches Police & Public Safety at Algonquin. "Saudi Arabia doesn't respect human rights. This contradicts the college's core values of caring, integrity and respect."

He said his point was made dramatically clear when in May, five Yemeni men found guilty of murder were beheaded and hanged in front of the University of Jazan.

Claude Brule, Algonquin's vice-president, academic, believes Saudi Arabia's invitation to Algonquin and other western schools is a sign that it is gradually becoming more open to contemporary democracy.

"We're making a positive change through education and progress," said Brule. "We've chosen engagement, not isolation."

Cops turn to web to solve shooting

The Ottawa police have released new details in the Malik Adjokatcher murder investigation in a new YouTube video.

Appealing to the public for help in solving the crime, Sgt. Dan Brennan of the Ottawa police outlines a chronology of events as a re-enactment plays out.

In his account of the May 14 killing Brennan says that Malik Adjokatcher was socializing with friends on Ritchie Street when he was shot unprovoked by a man who then fled towards an older-model dark passenger van. Police say a handgun was used in the crime and CBC reported that Det. Chris Benson said a handgun retrieved from a sewer on Orleans Boulevard was being tested to see if it matched the shooting.

The suspect is described as a dark-skinned male of average height and weight with medium-length dark hair.

Assault didn't take place in a cab: Cops

Ottawa police say they are changing their theory in an investigation of a sexual assault of a woman on Nov. 2, which they now are saying did not take place in a taxi cab.

Police said previously that a woman was sexually assaulted by a taxi driver en route from Gatineau to Sandy Hill. On Tuesday, police said the alleged sexual assault did not take place in a cab and the suspect is a not a taxi driver.

Teen pimp could go free in January

A mid-trial plea and good behaviour in jail will likely mean an admitted teen pimp will get a sentence of time served and probation.

Defence and Crown lawyers made a joint submission to an Ottawa judge Tuesday asking that the eldest of three teenage Ottawa girls accused of forcing other teens into prostitution will be sentenced to the time she's already served in jail plus two years of probation.

The girl, now 18, cannot be named under provisions of the Youth Criminal Justice Act. She was 16 when she was arrested in the spring of 2012, along with two other girls who were both 15 at the time.

She pleaded guilty in September to human trafficking, robbery, uttering threats, and breach of recognizance out of nine charges. Among the arrested trio, she faced the fewest charges.

Justice Diane Lahaie is slated to render a decision on sentencing on Jan. 17, 2014.

The surprise, mid-trial guilty plea the girl made with a second co-accused is among several mitigating factors, Crown prosecutor Fara Rupert argued Tuesday. The girl's youth, sound behaviour while detained, and surrendering herself into custody after admitting she could not abide by court-ordered bail conditions are also factors that might work in her favour.

However, Rupert raised several aggravating factors for the judge to consider, primarily the violence she inflicted upon a 16-year-old victim on May 30, 2012. According to the Crown, the accused befriended a teenage girl and brought her to a john's apartment to perform oral sex in exchange for $80.

Drug-treatment centre opens to city patients

Recovery Ottawa.
Officials, supporters and media celebrate Vanier clinic's opening

TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

The city's newest methadone clinic, Recovery Ottawa, officially opened its doors Tuesday. Founder Dr. Mark Ujjainwalla said 400 methadone patients are treated at the clinic and he hopes to have 1,000 patients by the end of next year.

Ujjainwalla said he came up with the idea of the clinic to tackle the city's cocaine and opioid "epidemic." He said almost 8,000 addicts tried to get help in 2011 and 2012 in Ottawa, but most were met with long waiting lists at area treatment centres.

"Most of them were forced back on the street to 'steal, prostitute and deal drugs,'" Ujjainwalla said.

A recovered addict himself and addiction specialist for the past 25 years, Ujjainwalla said he will take in any patient and start them on methadone or another drug immediately, even if they don't have a health card.

"These people are sick," he said. "These are not bad people who have to get good, these are sick people who need to get well."

With no funding, Ujjainwalla has completely paid for the 6,000-square-foot facility from his own pocket. He took Metro on a tour of the facility Tuesday.

Gutsy, never-give-up attitude brings sweet victory to X-Men

They're No. 1. Team wins NCSSAA Ottawa regional high school football championship in nail-biter against Falcons

ottawa@metronews.ca

St. Pius X-Men quarterback Malcolm Turgeon was never worried.

Even when his team was down by a full touchdown with less than two minutes on the clock in the National Capital Secondary Schools Athletic Association football championship Tuesday, he didn't fret.

Instead, he handed the ball off to running back Augustin Mande, who ran 40 yards for a last-minute touchdown — tying the game to keep his team's chances of winning alive.

The gutsy play pushed the Philemon Wright Falcons to the brink, and in overtime, the X-Men pounced with a field goal to win a nail-biting 25-22 game.

"I've been playing football for five years and this is my first championship," said Turgeon, out of breath from cheering with his teammates. "I had confidence in our team. I knew all along we were going to win."

The game didn't start out the best for the X-Men, as the Falcons scored on its opening drive. The X-Men came right back, though, and were up 17-16 at halftime.

But the Falcons wouldn't go away. They charged in the third and fourth quarter, scoring a touchdown and holding the X-Men at bay. And with less than two minutes left, the Falcons tried for a third-down conversion, but lost the ball. That's when Mande took control and ran through several defenders to tie the game 22-22.

In overtime, the X-Men kicked a third-down field goal through the uprights to go ahead by three — putting all the pressure on the Falcons. The X-Men's solid defence didn't budge on the final play and the screams from the home team's fans said it all: The X-Men were the champs.

"It comes down to your heart and your desire, your perseverance," said X-Men head coach Tim Robillard. "It's just working hard and never giving up."

Despite the heart-breaking loss, Falcons defensive coordinator Matt Orlando said he was proud of how well his Gatineau squad did in their first year playing in the Ottawa league — and playing against teams with players a year older.

"They worked their guts out all season long," said Orlando.

"We didn't know if we would even be able to compete in this league, moving over to Ottawa from the other side and to be in a city championship is just phenomenal. To lose in overtime, we're just extremely proud of everyone."

Typhoon Haiyan. Filipinos grateful for Canada's help, Ottawa aid worker says

Many Filipinos are thankful for Canadians who have rushed to their country to help rebuild after Typhoon Haiyan, says an Ottawa humanitarian aid worker in the Philippines.

Suzanne Charest, communications director for CARE Canada, an Ottawa-based organization that delivers humanitarian aid to impoverished countries, landed on the island of Cebu in the Philippines this week to help distribute food aid and shelter kits.

Every bit helps for the thousands killed and millions left homeless in the aftermath of the Nov. 7 typhoon, she said. "The vast majority of the homes that were damaged had their roofs blown off," said Charest Tuesday by phone from Manila.

With limited resources, some residents are recycling wood from downed trees to make shelter, she said. In her short time in Cebu, Charest said she has noticed Filipinos are recognizing the efforts of Canadians.

"Everywhere I go, people say thank you to Canada, thank you for coming to help the Filipino people. There's a deep sense of gratitude," she said. "The Canadian government has just announced some additional funding. It can make you feel really proud to have that sense of gratitude."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Monday Canada's financial contribution to the Philippines disaster relief efforts is close to $40 million. That number could grow as the federal government pledged to match private donations made by Canadians by Dec. 9.

Ottawa raises the flag for trans acceptance

Day of Remembrance.

'We have to be more accepting of diversity,' police chief says as city remembers those killed for being who they are

Ottawa Police Chief Charles Bordeleau, Sen. Grant Mitchell and councillor for Ward 5 and acting deputy mayor Eli El-Chantiry hosted members of Ottawa transgender community to raise the flag for the fourth annual Trans Day of Remembrance at Police Headquarters on Tuesday.

Similar ceremonies were held throughout the day at Ottawa bylaw offices, paramedic headquarters, Fire Services headquarters and city hall, with a candlelight vigil planned for Wednesday at the Human Rights Monument at Elgin and Lisgar at 7 p.m.

Trans Day of Remembrance is a day to honour the memories of the estimated 260 people who were murdered around the world in the last year because they were transgender. By doing so, trans people and their supporters hope to curb hate crimes and promote awareness of the trans community and their struggle for acceptance. According to Gender Mosaic spokesperson Amanda Ryan, the last trans person murdered in Canada was in 2003.

"Today, we remember trans people murdered for being who they are," said Mitchell, who is a big supporter of Bill C-279, which enshrines transgender rights. "Every day they encounter threats of physical and psychological violence. I feel strongly about fairness and it makes me sick to my stomach that some people have to put others down so they can feel better about themselves."

Ottawa's police force was the first in the country to officially support Trans Day of Remembrance in 2010.

"We have to be more accepting of diversity," said Bordeleau. "Safety and security applies to everyone. I don't like the word 'tolerance' because it implies putting up with something you don't like, when we should be focusing on acceptance."

Transgender activist Joanne Law remembered seven transgender friends who committed suicide because of the many social and personal hurdles trans people face.

"Ottawa is one of the most accepting cities, and the police force are the best in the country — a role model for the rest of the country," she said. DENIS ARMSTRONG/FOR METRO

Ford, Jesus and Kenney

Toronto, Ottawa. Mayor says he's thrown out the booze, top Tory says he's shamed the city

Toronto's disgraced mayor, Rob Ford, says he's had a "Jesus moment."

He says he's turning his life around, staying off alcohol and trying to lose weight.

Sun News pulls plug

Ford TV show fades to black

Sun News has cancelled Mayor Rob Ford's TV talk show, Ford Nation, after its debut Monday evening.

Kory Teneyck, the network's vice-president, confirmed in an email to Torstar News Service that the show is over.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

He told CBC's Peter Mansbridge he has had a "come to Jesus moment" brought on by all the "belittling."

It was just another eyebrow-raising episode in the Ford scandal, filled with stories about drugs and alcohol.

Another jolt came in Ottawa from top Tory Jason Kenney. He became the first federal cabinet minister to call on Ford to resign.

"I will say as an elected official that I think Mr. Ford has brought dishonour to public office and the office of mayor and his city," Kenney said as he left the Commons. Kenney added: "I personally think he should step aside."

Justin Trudeau also joined the fray. "I will take no lessons in accountability from a man whose fishing buddy is Rob Ford," Trudeau said in response to Stephen Harper's attempts to deflect his queries on the Senate scandal.

Councillors have slashed Ford's budget and handed many of his duties and staff to the deputy mayor.

They were sedated

Guilty of molesting 21 women

An anesthesiologist accused of molesting 21 female patients during surgery was found guilty on all counts Tuesday.

Dr. George Doodnaught — called a "sexual opportunist" by the Crown — had pleaded not guilty to sexually assaulting the women.

Some victims were in the Toronto courtroom as the verdict was read, and some people could be heard sighing with relief or whispering "Yes."

The assaults reported by the 21 women generally involved a combination of Doodnaught kissing them, fondling their breasts and putting his penis in their mouth or hand while they were under conscious sedation.

Judge David McCombs found Doodnaught's guilt on all the counts "overwhelming."

'Apocalyptic' storm floods Sardinia, kills at least 17

Residents ignored evacuation orders. Civil protection chief says system signalled highest level of risk

The Mediterranean island of Sardinia, prized by the jet-set for its white sand beaches and crystal-clear seas, was a flood-ravaged mud bath Tuesday after a freak torrential rainstorm killed at least 17 people, downed bridges and swept away cars.

The island, which draws royals, entrepreneurs and ordinary tourists alike during the dry, peak summer months, received more than 44 centimetres of rain in 24 hours Monday — half the amount it normally receives in a year, officials said.

Transport was hampered by rivers of cocoa-colored mud gushing over roads that forced the closure of several major thoroughfares, including a tunnel into the city of Olbia, according to the Anas which runs the roads and highways.

Olbia Mayor Gianni Giovannelli said the city had been destroyed by the "apocalyptic" storm, with bridges felled and water levels reaching 3 metres in some places.

Plane crash that killed 50 due to faulty flying

The pilots of a Boeing 737 that plunged into the ground at Kazan airport lost speed in a steep climb then overcompensated and sent the plane into a near-vertical dive, according to a preliminary report released Tuesday by Russian aviation experts. All 50 people aboard were killed.

The Moscow-based Interstate Aviation Committee, which oversees civil flights in much of the former Soviet Union, said the plane's engines and other systems were working fine until the moment the plane crashed Sunday night.

The plane's climb and its subsequent plunge lasted only about one minute and it struck the ground going about 450 kilometres per hour, the report said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A conservative student group at the University of Texas has cancelled its "Catch an Illegal Immigrant Game."

The Young Conservatives of Texas said Tuesday they feared retaliation from campus officials who called their plan a violation of the univer-

Group spokesman Lorenzo Garcia acknowledged the idea was "over the top" but said the university should not silence student protests.

Clashes. Tensions between Lebanese Sunnis, who largely back Syrian rebellion, and Shiites, who tend to support Assad, flare up in bloodshed

The mid-morning blasts hit the upscale neighbourhood of Janah, a Hezbollah stronghold, leaving bodies and pools of blood on the glass-strewn street amid burning cars. More than 140 people were wounded, officials said.

A Lebanese security official said the first suicide attacker was on a motorcycle that carried two kilograms of explosives. He blew himself up at the large black main gate of the Iranian mission, damaging the three-storey facility, the official said.

Less than two minutes later, a second suicide attacker driving a car rigged with 50 kilograms of explosives struck about 10 metres away, the official said. He spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity in line with regulations.

In recent weeks, Hezbollah fighters have backed Assad's troops in a series of victories over rebels, taking back a string of rebel-held towns in Syria. Shiite Iran is the main Mideast backer of Assad's government, believed to be providing it with key financing and weapons.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two suicide bombers detonated explosions outside the Iranian Embassy in a mainly Shiite district of the Lebanese capital on Tuesday, killing 23 people, including the Iranian cultural attaché, apparently in retaliation for the Lebanese group Hezbollah's support of Syrian President Bashar Assad.

The bombings appeared to be another strike in an intensifying proxy battle over Syria's civil war that is rattling its smaller neighbour Lebanon. An al-Qaida-linked Sunni extremist group claimed responsibility for the attack, saying more would follow unless the Iranian-backed Shiite Hezbollah withdraws fighters that have helped Assad's military score key victories over Syrian rebels.

A denial of the proposed Keystone XL pipeline would lead to more oil moving across the continent by rail, an executive with pipeline builder TransCanada Corp. said Tuesday, calling such an outcome a "tragedy."

With Keystone XL and other pipelines mired in regulatory delays, Canadian and U.S. oil producers have been increasingly turning to rail to get their crude to market.

#justjoking? Minister of employment posts, then deletes anti-union tweet

Shortly after midnight Tuesday, Canada's minister of employment took to Twitter to thank his staff for working overtime.

"Just wrapped up a meeting with several staff members, at midnight," Jason Kenney tweeted. "Good thing they're not unionized!"

Employment Minister Jason Kenney claimed this Twitter posting, later deleted, was a joke. TWITTER

Twitter users pounced on the minister, calling him "an uncaring boss" and accusing him of "union bashing." Others claimed the tweet was evidence of an anti-labour bias amongst federal Conservatives.

Unifor president Jerry Dias said Kenney's comments were "arrogant" and inappropriate given that roughly one in three Canadians belongs to a union.

Kenney quickly backpedalled, deleting the tweet and replacing it with one that lacked any reference to unions. He later referred to the remark as a joke, and said it "wasn't intended as a political comment."

As for Kenney's staff, Dias suggested they consider joining a union.

In sickness and in health, temps show up for work

The insecurity of temporary employment prevents workers from taking the time off to address their health issues, argues a team of researchers from the Institute for Work & Health, an independent not-for-profit organization, in a 2010 study.

They found that:

- Workers in temporary jobs were 37 per cent less likely to be absent due to sickness compared to those with permanent positions.
- Workers with tenure of one to three months were 27 per cent less likely to take an absence when compared to workers who hold a longer tenure.

Temp Does Ambulance Duty

I asked Darren to put Dan into the BMW's back seat. "If we dump him by the door at Crown, they'll be forced to take pity on him."

Darren rifled through the glove compartment. "Look! A BlackBerry Z10!" The BlackBerry then promptly rang (ringtone: Dust in the Wind by Kansas). "Hello?"

A woman squawked on the other end. I grabbed the receiver. "Hello, who's this?"

"It's Chantelle, Dan's wife. Who's this?"

"I'm Shannon. I'm a temp at Dan's office. He had an accident and we're trying to take him to a hospital but he doesn't have his credit cards so nobody wants him."

"Come to our house and pick me up."

"Aren't you in Florida?"

"I found a card with a pile of unused frequent flyer miles so I returned early."

Chantelle was on the curb. Her lips were swollen like Donald Duck's beak, and it was hard to not stare.

"I know I look strange but I never expected to get old and then one day it happened and, as you can see, I'm not handling it well. I know I look ridiculous."

On cue both Darren and I chimed, "No, you look great!"

Darren added, "I'm sure your lips will look terrific once they deflate, Chantelle."

Chantelle was unruffled by the sight of Dan in the back, and with me at the wheel and Darren in the passenger seat looking and smelling very street-y. Chantelle removed a fifth of vodka from her purse. "Any takers?"

Darren eagerly accepted, and we soon arrived at Crown Permanente. "You two lug him in," she said. "I'll handle the staff."

"You've got your credit cards, then?"

"Cards shmards. A well-dressed, well-nourished white woman with obvious cosmetic surgery is welcome in any hospital on the planet."

Dang if she wasn't right. The supermodel nurse beamed at her, while another fetched her a cappuccino and asked which satellite music station she preferred. We dropped Danimal's carcass inside the door and two hot guys who looked like Qantas flight attendants whisked him away. It couldn't have been more pleasant.

"You two wait in the car. I'll be out in a sec."

Chantelle soon emerged and got into the back seat. "Shannon take me home. Darren, you stay the night at my place. We can party and maybe you can take a shower later. Dan's clothes will fit you, too. Shannon, you keep the car for a few days."

"Seriously?"

"I may be aging gracefully, but I'm no idiot like Kevin's wife. Just promise me you won't set fire to it."

"It's a promise."

I feel like a bad person, but I was so excited to have a Beemer for a few days that I forgot to ask what was wrong with Dan.

TO THINE OWN SELFIE BE TRUE

Have you heard the Word?

The Word of the Year, that is.

According to the Oxford Dictionaries, the 2013 Word of the Year is "selfie": "A photograph that one has taken of oneself, typically one taken with a smartphone or web cam and uploaded to a social media website."

Selfie beat out other worthy words, such as "binge-watch," which is the stupefying practice of watching entire seasons of TV episodes in extended, coma-inducing couch sessions, and "olinguito," the cute, little, previously unknown mammal found in the mountain forests of Colombia and Ecuador.

Just think how trendy you can sound if you get all three into a single sentence, something like:

"I was, like, binge-watching back episodes of Too Cute on Animal Planet and uploading selfies, 'cause I was, like, bored, when I came across a program about the olinguito, which, was, like, just

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

discovered this year. It's like the smallest member of the raccoon family."

Or something like that.

Selfie is the perfect word for a neo-narcissist generation that can't resist itself. Typically a selfie is taken in poor light, usually out of focus, artlessly posed and composed but nevertheless considered suitable for sharing with the WHOLE world on Instagram.

I don't see the attraction. Every selfie I've ever taken looks like Nick Nolte's mug shot and has been instantly deleted. I guess I need to spend more time getting in touch with my inner 15-year-old girl.

I'm obviously in the minority. Oxford picked selfie because the frequency of use has increased by 17,000 per cent over the same time last year.

Which leads me to wonder if the Oxonians are running some vast offshore language surveillance pound where bearded professors in tweed and leather-elbow-patched jackets monitor the world's conversations while sipping sherry.

You should know as well that Oxford's not the only outfit engaging in this Word of the Year racket. In fact, there's even a Word of the Year season. This year's began on Nov. 5, when the Global Language Monitor issued its 10 Top Words, which, oddly enough, does not include selfie. The two lists do however share "twerking," which is defined as: "To dance to popular music in a sexually provocative manner involving thrusting hip movements and a low, squatting stance." As in: "Look, Daddy, Hanna Montana's twerking."

The Word of the Year season ends, thankfully, in January, when the American Dialect Society announces its candidate. Last year's, by the way, was "hashtag," as in "#decline of Western civilization."

Meanwhile, you'll have to excuse me. I'm not feeling too well. I dropped my smartphone into the toilet while I was taking a selfie of me taking a selfie in the bathroom mirror, and now I'm suffering from nomophobia (2012 runner-up) which means "anxiety caused by being without one's mobile phone."

I feel so unfriended (2009).

Shot with a DIY cam? Snow way

A Russian photographer proves you don't need expensive equipment to take wonderful macro photographs.

Alexey Kljatov, from Moscow, used a homemade camera rig consisting of a wooden board, adhesive tape, a piece of glass and a $45 lens from an old camera to capture the beautiful shapes of snowflakes.

As Kljatov's images show, no two snowflakes are alike, and atmospheric factors give snow crystals their uniqueness. Snowflakes are hexagonal in shape in their basic form, but once they've fallen, the crystals interact with temperature, vapour and gravity. METRO

A longtime fan, the first song Fortune learned to play on the guitar growing up was the band's smash Devil Inside.

Aftermath: INXS fired Fortune in 2011. Chasing Fortune a film about J.D.'s wild ride and his attempts to keep on rocking premieres Nov. 12 on Super Channel.

Ronnie James Dio

After Black Sabbath sacked Ozzy Osbourne in 1979, Ronnie James Dio — who had previously fronted Elf and Rainbow — was tapped to join heavy metal's most influential band.

Dio revitalized Sabbath during his original three-year spell with the band. But you only really know how much they love you when they ask you back, as they did in the early '90s to record Dehumanizer.

Aftermath: Dio was a successful '80s solo artist spurred by the strength of hits like Holy Diver and Rainbow in the Dark. Before his untimely passing in 2010 he would "temp" again with Sabbath buddies Tony Iommi and Geezer Butler on a 98-date world tour under the band name Heaven & Hell.

Adam Lambert

While nobody can really replace Freddie Mercury, the American Idol Season 8 glam rocking runner-up has the dramatic chops and requisite vocal gymnastic abilities to do Queen anthems We are the Champions and Bohemian Rhapsody justice.

Following the five year Queen + Paul Rodgers collaboration, which resulted in a pair of world tours and a studio album, Lambert has stepped up to the plate.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

The dictionary people just want to be friends with celebrities

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News in New York City

I think the Oxford English Dictionary is trying to suck up to Kim Kardashian.

What other explanation could there be for their selection of "selfie" as the word of the year? Is word of the year even a thing? Stop trying to make word of the year happen, Oxford English Dictionary.

The official explanation for the OED's choice of selfie is the word's sudden ubiquity. "It's not a new word," their blog explains. "But our word of the year need not be a new word. However, it does need to demonstrate some kind of prominence over the preceding year or so and selfie certainly fits the bill. It seems like everyone who is anyone has posted a selfie somewhere on the Internet. If it is good enough for the Obamas or the Pope, then it is good enough for word of the year."

Whatever, OED. All I can say about this clear attempt to get RTed by selfie addicts like Kim Kardashian and Miley Cyrus is, please let me know if it works, because I would also like to be friends with celebrities. This is The Word, after all. The Word's word of the year could totally be a thing.

I have to admit that the art of selfies has been significantly refined this year. Celebs like Chris Pratt and Kim Kardashian use them to show off their slammin' bods. Beyoncé debuted a bold new hair-cut. Miley Cyrus took one in a wedding dress, apparently to quell rumours that her engagement to Liam Hemsworth was in trouble (it was, of course). And, of course, regular folks took selfies too. Usually at funerals.

Was Brittany Murphy poisoned?

When Brittany Murphy passed away suddenly in 2009, the official cause of death was pneumonia and anemia. Most people assumed that, in the case of a super-skinny, erratic starlet, that was a euphemism for death by drug abuse. When her husband, Simon Monjack, died just five months later of the same cause — pneumonia and anemia — that fit neatly in with the theory.

However, Murphy's father, Angelo Bertolotti, wasn't satisfied. He recently secured the rights to send samples of Murphy's hair and tissue to a lab for independent testing. The Examiner has the lab report, and it tells a shockingly different story:

"Ten of the heavy metals evaluated were detected at levels higher than the WHO (World Health Organization) high levels. ... If we were to eliminate the possibility of a simultaneous accidental heavy metals exposure to the sample donor then the only logical explanation would be an exposure to these metals (toxins) administered by a third party perpetrator with likely criminal intent."

Heavy metals such as

those found at high levels in Murphy's body are often present in rat poison and insecticides. They can cause all the symptoms that Murphy and Monjack suffered before their deaths.

It's hard to remember all the way back to 2007 when Murphy and Monjack were married, but the two were frequently the target of tabloid speculation. Monjack had a shady, criminal past, and once they were hitched, Murphy started to act increasingly strange and appear increasingly gaunt. Shortly before Murphy's death, Monjack was rushed to a hospital after his plane landed at LAX. TMZ reported that Monjack was incoherent when EMTs boarded the plane. An asthma attack was blamed for his behaviour.

To make it even weirder, Sharon Murphy, Brittany's mother, continued to live with Monjack after her daughter's death, even sharing a bed with him. DOROTHY ROBINSON/METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK CITY

The city on the St. Lawrence River offers walks down centuries-old streets lined with elegant architecture and historic sites. Best of all, many of Montreal's greatest attractions can be experienced for free. Here are five free things to do on a visit to Montreal.

PHOTOS AND STORY: THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mount Royal

You can look up and see the towering trees of Mount Royal from nearly everywhere in Montreal. The nearly 200-hectare park tops out at 770 feet and boasts running, hiking and biking trails, an overlook onto downtown Montreal and a large lake. Frederick Law Olmsted, the man behind New York's Central Park, drew the plans for the park.

Free things to do in Montreal

Old Montreal and Old Port

The historic Old Montreal or Vieux Montreal district stretches along the St. Lawrence River in the southern part of Montreal. You could spend hours wandering the twisty, narrow walkways. Along the banks of the river at the Old Port, watch barges from a tree-lined park. A walking tour could include the Notre Dame Basilica and Montreal City Hall.

Montreal Museum of Fine Arts

The collection at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts ranges from the European Renaissance, Rembrandt and Monet to Inuit sculpture, Jean-Michel Basquiat and other modern works. Admission to the general collection and outdoor sculpture garden is free but there is a charge for special exhibits.

Notre Dame de Bon Secours Chapel

A large statue of the Virgin Mary stands atop this church on the St. Lawrence River, leaning forward to welcome sailors into harbour. The origins of this ornate church date to the 1650s and the chapel visitors see today dates to the 1770s. Inside frescos, statues and altar artwork rival that of European churches. But the chapel earns its charm from the small replicas of sailing boats that hang from the ceiling like chandeliers, each with vigil candles.

Jean Talon Market

Small markets dot the Montreal streets but one of the larger and more interesting is Jean Talon Market or Marche Jean-Talon. The market has both covered and uncovered stalls filled with seasonal produce, cheeses, pastries and breads and other local specialties, like maple syrups. It all makes for a colourful and lively walk past vendors speaking French and English to customers.

Beaver Creek.
Colorado ski resort has something luxurious for everyone

ANDREW DOBSON
life@metronews.ca

Beaver Creek, near Avon, Colo., offers a playground for well-to-do couples and families keen on experiencing the crème de la crème in fine dining, resort accommodation and Rocky Mountain alpine adventures.

The resort has 25 lifts and 150 conventional trails. In addition to skiing and snowboarding, Beaver Creek has a dedicated Nordic and snowshoe centre.

Guests have the opportunity to explore 32 km of trails as well as Haymaker Tubing Hill, which offers sliding fun for those three feet and taller. Outfitters in the area also offer snowmobile tours, dog sledding and winter fly fishing.

Family friendly New Year's Eve

The third Annual NYE Family Fun Carnival is always a big hit with locals and tourists alike. Each year the alfresco party sells out, so be sure to book your tickets early. The event starts with a Torchlight Ski Down at 6:15 p.m. followed by fireworks that blast off in The Village at 6:45 p.m. Guests stay up until the wee hours of the night with the opportunity to enjoy carnival midway games, interactive inflatable fun, pool tables, foosball, arcade, dancing, a photo booth and two balloon drops.

Beaver Creek features 25 lifts and 150 conventional ski trails. CHRIS MCLENNAN

The Pines Lodge

Nestled among ancient aspen and pine groves on the slopes of Beaver Creek Resort, this lodge offers a great view of the Colorado Rockies with handy ski-in/ski-out access.

The 60-room lodge is home to Grouse Mountain Grill — an AAA Four Diamond Award-winning restaurant — outdoor pool, Jacuzzi and fitness centre.

Guest rooms feature rich pine wood, a marble bath area, ski boot heaters, plush bathrobes and RockResorts Spa products.

Condominiums and townhomes are also available and feature one to four bedrooms with spacious living areas, full kitchens, washer and dryers, balconies, soaking tubs and fireplaces.

Cabin feast

If you're making the trip down to Beaver Creek, check out Beano's Cabin. In the winter guests are picked up in a sleigh and whisked up the mountain to the restaurant's jaw-dropping location.

Come fly with me!

Air Canada recently announced non-stop winter service from Toronto to Vail/Eagle Airport commencing Dec. 14, which means Ontario-based ski bums now have an opportunity to conquer new North American moguls and mountains this ski season.

The decor is classic Rocky Mountain lore, complete with bear skin hide, antique ski and snow shoes, a deer bust, framed cowboy-loving landscapes and elk antler chandeliers.

The five-course dinner, prepared by executive chef Bill Greenwood, offers exquisite culinary panache on the plate paired with a live band that croons moody Gordon Lightfoot ballads.

Treat yourself

Those looking for a bit of pampering should book themselves into the Allegría Spa at The Park Hyatt.

Start off your visit at the relaxing Aqua Sanitas, modelled on ancient Roman baths. Guests can indulge in a self-guided water ritual with a thermal pool, caldarium mineral pools, rain shower, caldarium steam room and tepidarium — a warm room heated by an underfloor heating system. From the spa menu, signature treatments include a Ginger Peach Cure and Slumber Massage.

Oh Paris, will you Marais me?

The coolest quarter. Neighbourhood boasts chic shops, bakeries and boutique hotels

Metro World News in New York

Besides the Eiffel Tower, the Louvre and other touristy (but essential) stops for Parisian visitors, the trendy Marais district is a must.

But the Marais, which translates to “marsh” in French, wasn’t always this hip. Tour guide Skall (yes, that’s his full name — he’s French, OK?) tells Metro that the influx of the gay community in the 1980s restored the enclave’s cool factor. The arrival of plenty an art dealer also helped, as the area today is famous for its contemporary galleries. Make sure you stop by these other establishments for a truly tres magnifique Marais experience.

Fromagerie Jouannault
No trip to Paris would be complete without a visit to a specialty cheese shop. Whether you like your curds from cows, sheep or goats, find it here (even if it didn’t originate in France). Want to take some cheese back to the States? The staff will vacuum-seal your purchase so it’s TSA-friendly.

Le Marche des Enfants Rouges
The city’s oldest covered market is also the area’s best kept secret: walk through an alleyway to enter this indoor market, where you’ll likely bump into Parisians doing their grocery shopping. You can buy everything from local produce to international foods. The market is also a great place to stop for a bite, with cuisines ranging from Japanese to French to Moroccan represented. Fun fact: It’s named for the red outfits children at a nearby orphanage used to wear long ago.

Violette & Leonie
Find vintage and modern-day womenswear, plus shoes and jewels, at this trendy consignment shop. Designer pieces from Dior, Hermes and Isabel Marant mingle with high street items.

Merci
Picture the Urban Outfitters of Paris and you’ve got Merci. Shop for quirky souvenirs — Eiffel Tower cookie cutter, anyone? — plus home furnishings (there’s a plethora of kitchen items on the top level), clothes, bath products, stationery and much more. The store recently did a collaboration with NYC’s Museum of the Modern Art, so you know the goods are stylin’. When you’re done shopping, peruse the library of cookbooks and stop for a coffee.

Dalloyau
The history of this sweets shop is almost as rich as its chocolates. Charles Dalloyau was a baker who won the attention of Louis XIV during a tasting. The king hired Dalloyau, and he and his brothers worked for the royal court over four generations. The store is famous for its Opera cake: a thin layer cake soaked in coffee syrup and topped with coffee buttercream, chocolate ganache and a dark chocolate coating (serves six; about $60). Avoid the Laduree lines for a macaron from these guys instead.

Hotel du Petit Moulin
This quirky hotel used to house the oldest bakery in Paris (the exterior retains the original signage). Each room is designed in a different fashion by Christian Lacroix, and the eccentric nature of the building means that each room is shaped differently. If you can, book Room 104 — you’ll walk down a flight of zebra-covered steps into your private dwelling. Rooms start at about $336 per night.

Come down for eggs, ham, cheese and those fabulous French pastries in the morning. Rooms start at about $518 per night.

At these hotels
Before leaving for dinner during your stay, stop for a drink at the Honesty Bar: Fix yourself a cocktail and, on the honor system, check the price list and leave the appropriate number of euros. Ironically, both hotels have just added a Dishonesty Hour, Wednesdays from 5-6 p.m., when you can help yourself to drinks for free.

Winter getaways

How to choose your Hawaiian island

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

If the onset of winter has you searching for the sun, may I suggest Hawaii? Far more than Florida without Disney World, each of the state's six main islands has a distinct flavour that will give you a true taste of paradise.

Oahu is home to the capital of Honolulu, a city of first class restaurants, hopping nightclubs and the world famous Waikiki Beach. Second World War history buffs will appreciate touring the sites of Pearl Harbor, while those looking for a quieter spot should check out the local surf culture on the North Shore of the island.

subdued in contrast to Oahu. The lush "Garden Isle" is an upscale island perfect for breathtaking hikes or lounging on the beach. If you can afford to splurge, a helicopter ride is the perfect way to take in the island's incredible waterfalls.

Maui is a blend of Oahu and Kauai, offering a wide variety of accommodation options, cultural activities (a luau is a must) and the most swimmable beaches in the state. The twisty and incredible scenic road to Hana is a must-do stomach turner. Local chefs, using the traditional Mom and Pop surf-side food shacks as their inspiration, are credited for leading the Hawaiian regional food movement.

The Big Island, best known for the active Mauna Kea volcano, is home to Hawaii Volcanoes National Park. The island has little in the way of sand beaches, but does offer an incredible topography of black lava rock and stunning ocean views. Sport fishermen and golf enthusiasts will enjoy the outdoor activities while those looking to relax with a good cuppa will enjoy the locally grown Kona coffee.

Molokai, with no traffic lights and minimal accommodation, is a step back in time. The island, partially surrounded by a 28-kilometre fringe reef, is a great base for whale watching. Motorized thrill crafts are banned between Dec. 15 and May 15 as the ocean according to one local, "turns into whale soup."

Lanai, a former pineapple plantation, is the smallest of the islands. Apart from two large Four Seasons resorts there is very little on the island. It is the ideal place to come relax and admire the natural beauty. Although visiting all the islands on one trip is too ambitious, Lanai makes a nice two or three day add on.

PowerPoint personalities: Meet the four faces of a fantastic workforce

Who do you think you are? Identifying your personality type can help you focus your career down a path best-suited to you

TalentEgg.ca

In a competitive job market, it's important to show employers that you have what it takes to become a valued member of their team.

Employers look beyond hard skills and experience — they also want to know if your personality type will suit their needs, and will sometimes even conduct personality tests during the hiring process.

So, how can you identify your personality type?

Software Advice CEO, Don Fornes, along with psychiatrist Dr. James Maynard and researcher Holly Regan, found that top-performing employees can be categorized into one of four desirable personality types: The Giver, the Champ, the Matrix Thinker and the Savant.

The Giver

This employee puts the needs of others before their own.

They work hard and frequently go above and beyond what is expected of them.

Their pleasant nature and eagerness to please is often appreciated, but they can be prone to burn out

When all four personality types are represented within a company, great outcomes are guaranteed. iStock because of their tendency to take on extra work and put others first.

Givers are team-players, non-confrontational and conflict-averse.

When Givers are stressed, they tend to suffer silently because they don't want to rock the boat.

They may possess good leadership skills, but usually would rather be in a support role.

Givers can improve their job performance by establishing a clear understanding of work priorities and expectations with team members and managers.

The Champ

An enthusiastic people-person — many successful salespeople and politicians are in this category.

Champs are driven, confident, motivated and skilled at reading people's emotions. Champs prefer to be independent and strive toward personal success.

They sometimes have difficulty working towards a team or group objective. While Champs believe in themselves and the companies they work for, they can develop an inflated ego and they often have a chip on their shoulder from past hardships.

This can lead Champs to be stubborn and belligerent with management and fellow employees.

Where possible, an office Champ should learn more about other coworkers' responsibilities through teamwork or job shadowing. This will help them develop a sense of perspective.

The Matrix Thinker

This is a creative employee who often thinks outside the box.

A Matrix Thinker is a clever problem-solver and an innovative connector of ideas. The Matrix Thinker can be a revolutionary, but can also be disorganized, impulsive and easily distracted.

They may have difficulty completing projects on time because of their tendency to constantly jump from idea to idea.

This personality type often has difficulty relating to co-workers. They prefer to work alone so that they can have control over their projects and have difficulty handling criticism.

Matrix Thinkers should push for the time and resources they need to do the innovative work that makes them so valuable — and then deliver results.

The Savant

This is a team member who is really, really good at what they do.

- They have incredible focus and are determined to become experts in their field. Savants are most successful when working in a field that involves intensive knowledge of a specific topic.
- They are often skilled writers, researchers and engineers. Savants are perfectionists and may have trouble dealing with opposition to their expert opinion. They are often introverted and suffer social anxiety.
- A workplace Savant should try and integrate with their team. Participating in team projects and activities will help them build a rapport and exercise their social skills.
- Recognizing these personality types in the workplace can help you identify where your contributions provide the most value and targets areas of potential growth.

An education on effectively executing an electronic exchange

When dealing with email communication it is crucial to conduct yourself in a professional manner.

Everyone has received an email lacking a salutation or sign-off and only a bare attempt at capitalization, grammar or sentence structure. If these habits continue when the sender enters the workforce he or she will find that this unprofessional behaviour can have a significant and negative impact on career prospects.

If you take the time to write accurate, concise and respectful emails you will be perceived in a better light and will likely receive more positive and helpful responses.

Here are some tips to help you create a professional image and manage your email:

Compose

When writing emails it is always best to err on the side of formality. Professional emails should include accurate punctuation, capitalization, sentence structure, grammar and spelling.

If you are not sure how to address someone, start with the most formal option like Dear Ms. Smith, then wait for the reply to determine how to address further correspondence.

For professional communication emoticons, abbreviations and slang acronyms like LOL are too informal.

Insert the receiver's address last. This ensures that you do not accidentally send an incomplete email or forget an attachment. This is particularly important when dealing with a sensitive topic. Better yet, if a topic

Format

Avoid the use of wallpaper or colourful fonts that are distracting and slow down the receiver's ability to process the message.

When it comes to font type and size stick with the basic serif fonts, such as Times New Roman, or sans-serif, such as Arial, in the 10-to-11-point range.

Reread messages before sending. This allows you to check the tone and content of the message from the reader's perspective and enables you to catch mistyped words — such as god instead of good — that will not be caught by your spell checker. An articulate, concise and accurate email tells others that you are intelli-

Accepting the young and the old into the workplace fold

What's your number?

How to manage age differences at your company

TalentEgg.ca

As you enter the workforce, it's likely that at some point you'll work with or for someone who falls into a different age cohort than yourself.

Working with an older or younger employee or employer can be tricky, as your age difference can cause friction around interests, work habits, career plans and more.

While it's only normal to find any source of workplace tension a little anxiety-inducing, treat the experience as an opportunity to learn from your colleague and develop your own communication and collaboration skills along the way.

Understand the terminology

The major age cohorts currently in the workforce are baby boomers, generation X and generation Y. Here's a quick breakdown of the relative ages and dispositions of each group.

It's useful to be aware of how these cohorts are "traditionally" described, so that you can recognize and avoid stereotyping and understand how both you and others may make assumptions about different age groups. Every person is unique and will bring their own attributes and personality into the workplace.

- Baby boomers are those born between 1946 and 1964. As it relates to the workplace, boomers are often considered competitive, placing a high value on education and believing that workers should pay their dues.

- Generation X includes those born between 1965 and 1977. This generation is portrayed as possessing an independent attitude, skeptical perspective and valuing work-life balance quite heavily.

- Generation Y are those individuals born anytime from 1978 to 1999. Gen Y is considered optimistic and technologically adept and its members value constant feedback.

Be curious

If you're unsure how to relate to a colleague, the best way to start is by striking up a conversation. Be genuinely curious about other people's interests and make an effort with everyone in your office, no matter their age.

Although it can be easy to be intimidated by someone older than you, remember that an age gap doesn't have to mean a gap in conversation — you've both grown up in separate times and experienced different things, so you should have a lot to talk about.

Flyers brush off Senators' third-period push

Senators Chris Phillips and Erik Condra rush into goalie Robin Lehner's crease during a tussle between Mark Borowiecki and the Flyers' Scott Hartnell on Tuesday night in Philadelphia. Senators centre Kyle Turris tied the game 2-2 early in the third period, but the Flyers struck back with three unanswered from Kimmo Timonen, Wayne Simmonds and Adam Hall to clinch a 5-2 victory. MATT SLOCUM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crosby, Ovechkin partying like its 2009

NHL. Penguins captain and his Capitals foil turning back on top

Dan Bylsma remembers the uneasy feeling.

It was Game 2 of the 2009 Eastern Conference semifinals between the Pittsburgh Penguins and Washington Capitals when Sidney Crosby and Alex Ovechkin were going goal-for-goal.

"It felt like every time they got the puck, they were going to do something with it," the Penguins coach said. "It's nice to see when your guy has it, but when you see their guy doing the same thing, it ended up being (like) who's going to score last is going to win this game."

Sidney Crosby and Alex Ovechkin will renew their rivalry Wednesday night when the Penguins visit the Capitals. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Crosby scored last as each of the NHL's top stars recorded a hat trick, but Ovechkin and the Capitals won the game. The Penguins won the series and went on to capture the Stanley Cup.

That was the height of the Crosby-versus-Ovechkin rivalry.

Concussion problems derailed Crosby, and Ovechkin needed to switch from left to right wing to regain his scoring touch, but Wednesday night they meet in Washington atop their games simultaneously for the first time in years, engendering plenty of nostalgia about the good old days.

Consider it a rivalry renewed as the Penguins and Capitals play for first place in the Metropolitan Division and Crosby and Ovechkin revive the debate about who is the league's best player. Ovechkin has 40 goals and 13 assists in his past 42 games dating to last season, when he won the Hart Trophy as NHL MVP, while Crosby has 19 goals and 42 assists over the same span.

Ronaldo treats Portugal to spot in Brazil with trio

The irrepressible Cristiano Ronaldo scored a dazzling hat trick to send Portugal into the 2014 World Cup finals at the expense of Sweden on Tuesday, while France advanced by conjuring a remarkable turnaround against Ukraine.

There was disappointment for Iceland which failed to become the least populous nation to reach the final after losing to Croatia on the final night of European qualification.

The list of African qualifiers was completed with Ghana advancing over Egypt and Algeria progressing on away goals at the expense of Burkina Faso.

Armstrong alleged collusion by Verbruggen during his first Tour victory in an interview published Monday in Britain's Daily Mail. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Henry Burris runs the ball during the CFL Eastern final in Toronto. Burris has endured wholesale changes in Hamilton this year, leading his team to this Sunday's Grey Cup in Regina. NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ticats' Grey Cup run a family affair for Burris

CFL. Ahead of clash with Roughriders, Hamilton QB and clan embracing football folklore

Henry Burris is thrilled to have delivered Hamilton Tiger-Cats fans their first Grey Cup berth since 1999. But now the 38-year-old quarterback can give his youngest son, four-year-old Barron, the opportunity to learn about the cup's rich history.

"I asked Barron on Thursday night when we were talking, 'Do you know what the Grey Cup is,' and he was like, 'Daddy, no, I don't know what it is,'"

Burris said. "When he said that, I almost went to tears."

Barron will be able to experience it all first-hand, thanks in large part to his father. Burris threw for 371 yards and three TDs to rally Hamilton to a wild 36-24 win over the Toronto Argonauts in the East Division final Sunday. The Ticats will face the Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Grey Cup on Sunday in Regina.

Burris's oldest son, Armand, had the chance to experience a Grey Cup in '08 when Burris led the Calgary Stampeders to the CFL championship. But Barron wasn't yet born so this will be his first Grey Cup experience.

Forget about the ring or $16,000 winner's share, seeing his youngest son soak it all in and being there to experience it with him is priceless for Burris.

"They (your family) go through all the sacrifices, being in the stands when people are getting after you saying all types of things about their Daddy, this is what it's all about at the end of the day," Burris said after Sunday's win. "I told him (Barron) I wanted to help make his dream come true for him one day and here we are now. This is truly amazing."

Rallying Hamilton from a 24-10 deficit against Toronto also exorcised some demons for Burris, who pounded the ground after his latest win.

"It just seemed like all the demons of the past four years, what an organization threw at me and all the people have thrown at me, I was just letting them go," Burris said.

Standout in Steeltown

Named the CFL's outstanding player in 2010 with Calgary, Burris was replaced as a starter the next season and dealt to Hamilton

- 2012. While Burris enjoyed the best season of his career, Hamilton slumped to a 6-12 record
- 2013. Despite a new roster, a new coach in Kent Austin and a new temporary home in Guelph, Burris led the league in passing while the Ticats improved to 10-8
- Playoffs. Hamilton beat Montreal in the Eastern semi-final in OT and routed the Argos in last Sunday's final, booking their passage to Regina

2014 Honda Accord Hybrid

Review. Honda's latest hybrid a refined way to get great fuel economy

Drive@metronews.ca

Nothing like a butt kicking to get you motivated. The 2014 Accord Hybrid debuts a completely new and different hybrid system, unlike anything found on the previous and easily forgotten Accord Hybrid (2004-2006) and/or the slow-selling hybrids still in Honda's portfolio—Civic Hybrid and CR-Z.

This 2014 Honda Accord Hybrid is not just great for a hybrid — it's a great car. For one thing, it is based on the new, ninth-generation Accord, just released to near universal acclaim in 2013. So, like all Accords, the Hybrid offers a stylish, slick-handling package, which offers the same great interior space, and comfort of the previous generation, even though it's slightly smaller.

Honda's hybrid rethink created a system where the all-new 2.0-litre gasoline engine (141 hp and 122 pound feet of torque) only drives the vehicle on its own in "highway" scenarios, when it is electronically coupled to a single overdrive gear. Otherwise the engine functions in Hybrid Mode, where it spins a generator, which in turn sends electricity to the electric drive motor and to the Lithium-ion battery pack. Yes, Hybrid Mode makes Accord Hybrid function very much like a Chevrolet Volt. In EV mode the gas engine is shut down, and you get about two kilometres of pure electric driving. Hybrids typically have better city fuel efficiency ratings than their highway ratings, because EV mode only comes on in the city. But Accord's gas engine has been designed to run in a fuel-efficiency sweet spot when powering that one highway gear. Net result is a highway fuel efficiency rating, 4.0 l/100 km, which is quite close to its fantastic city rating of 3.7 l/100 km. The combined rating is 3.8 l/100 km — the best among the current crop of mid-size hybrids.

This engine runs on the Atkinson combustion cycle, which most hybrids adopt because it allows for smoother and faster starting (hybrids always ask their gasoline engines to shut down whenever they can, so re-starts need to be smooth). But the Atkinson cycle is not best for ultimate power. So Honda created engine camshafts with two sets of lobes (Atkinson and regular). The engine management system figures out which to use and when. The normal Accord is very quiet on the road. This thing is quiet with cheese.

The Accord Hybrid is actually equipped with a noise-making device for EV mode, to get pedestrian attention. I'm not fond of it, but the high-pitch sound recedes from your attention easily enough when you're not 100 per cent paying attention to it, and you can manually turn it off. The hybrid handles similarly to the Accord sedan, which is to say, admirably. The added weight of the electric-drive hardware was compensated with more aluminum panels and suspension bits, and

The Accord Hybrid debuts a new tweak to "regenerative braking," by coming on immediately after the driver takes his or her foot of the accelerator. Normal systems come on only when the brake pedal is activated. This does affect the "feel" of the coasting, but it's for a good cause.

The other trippy thing is how the gasoline engine effort and sound is not always directly correlated to what the vehicle is doing on the road. But get used to that, and the hybrid rewards with a smooth and serene driving experience. The three driving modes come and go as they please, in a very seamless fashion. If you need lots of cargo space, make sure you can live with the Hybrid's smaller trunk. The only other caveat might be price. The Accord is priced at a slight premium over the other mid-size hybrid competitors. While the base model goes for

Electric motor

The Accord doesn't really have a transmission in the conventional sense. The gas engine is only connected to the drive wheels when electronically engaged to one highway gear. The rest of the time the 124 kW electric drive motor with 226 lb-ft of torque is powering the drive wheels. This drive motor is fed by either the battery pack, or by the adjoining generator, which looks like a smaller version of the electric drive motor.

$29,590, the $35,690 Touring model is where you get navigation and the newer convenience and safety features. But either model is an entry into one of the most advanced hybrid and fuel-efficiency technologies currently on the market.

Correction

The base price listed in the factbox for last week's Toyota Corolla review was incorrect. The car's price was listed as $33,500 when it should have been $17,600. Metro apologizes for the error.

Beautiful oxymoron that is the big Mini

Latest model. From tiny, ground-breaking beginnings the lovable small car has grown over time but it still has people transfixed

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

The new-generation Mini just introduced this week at its production facility in Oxford, England, is the biggest Mini ever.

Yes, this is the era of the big Mini, and yes, it sounds oxymoron-ish, but what are you going to do? People like the Mini, they just don't want them actually "mini" anymore.

The design challenge for the original Mini was to make the smallest possible car that would still accommodate four adults and luggage. Designer Alex Issigonis struck upon the idea of using very small 10-inch wheels, all independent suspension, a transverse mounted engine driving the front wheels, and a gearbox and final drive built into the sump of the engine. So compact; so clever!

When it came to fruition, way back in 1959, it basically changed the course of automobile design. It was cheap, practical, roomy for its size, fuel efficient, could turn corners with the best of them, fun to drive, and looked distinctive and cool.

Over 5.2 million examples and variants, under various company names and nameplates, were eventually built and bought. When the last century came to an end, the Ford Model T was named "car of the century," but Mini was not far off the Model T's rear bumper, and was named second most important car of the last 100 years. The template of a transverse-mounted engine and front-wheel drive is still the most predominant way to build a passenger car.

Mini's modern re-boot began in 2001, when the first Mini built under BMW ownership and stewardship hit the market. And you have to admire the way BMW has guided the icon forward.

The old school was very popular for its practicality and character. BOTH IMAGES BMW

The new school has the character and all-round performance too.

The Mini unveiled this week is the "third" Mini by BMW and it closely follows the formula of the previous re-design: Modernize and make it slightly bigger, but not so much anyone would notice by looking at in isolation. Leave the styling and iconic shape pretty much alone, because, well, everyone is good with it, and there's a chance you could screw things up.

This new Mini, on sale first in Europe and by spring here, is the first vehicle utilizing BMW's new front-wheel drive platform (called UKL), which is also destined for the next BMW 1 Series. The biggest difference over the previous platform is the increased wheelbase (now 2,495 mm) and lighter weight through more use of high-strength steel.

Those two items alone should make Mini a better performer, but BMW promises lots of other goodies, including three new twin-turbocharged engines: the 136-hp 1.5-litre "three cylinder"; the 192-hp 2.0-litre "four cylinder"; and a 116-hp 1.5-litre "three-cylinder" diesel (no word on that diesel coming here).

Interesting new technologies include optional LED headlights, a permanently installed SIM card, electric steering, head-up display, camera-based cruise control and automatic braking if a collision is imminent.

This Mini is only about half a metre longer than the original one, but lots taller and wider. Apparently cargo capacity with the rear seats down is now more than 1,000 litres. Sounds like hot-tub territory to me, and for a Mini, a little big.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20
Some people achieve so much they lose touch with reality, but that's not something you have to worry about. Keep your feet planted firmly on the ground this week, and you'll accomplish more than anyone.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21
Make sure the needs of loved ones are taken care of today, no matter how mundane. You may wish you were doing something more interesting but people are counting on you and you can't let them down.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21
However vague your ambitions may have been in recent months you now know what it is you want and how to go about getting it. Your rivals will try to block your path but they won't succeed.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23
There is a possibility you will waste money on things you don't need over the next 24 hours. But, if it makes you feel good about yourself, maybe it's not a problem. It's only money.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23
You will be touchy today, and for no apparent reason. Perhaps it's good you get the bad stuff out of your system now, as later in the week you will have to work closely with people.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may feel vulnerable but try not to withdraw from the world completely. There are still things that need to be done that cannot be done on your own. Try smiling, it helps.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Someone in a position of power will ask you to take on extra chores today but make sure they define exactly what is expected of you, and make sure you define your limits.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
A change of direction may be called for but there is no need to go to extremes. The planets indicate a minor adjustment will be enough to put you back on the path to success.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You will be on the move today or tomorrow but if you want your journey to be enjoyable, you should plan before you leave. If you leave things to chance, there's no telling where you might end up.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You cannot afford to make decisions about money matters at the moment. The more others push you to move one way or the other, the more you must insist on staying right where you are. There's really no rush.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may have to give up something you enjoy to please others today, but it will be a sacrifice worth making. In the long-term the more loved ones are happy with life, the more you will be happy with life.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20
Your big idea is almost ready to go public with but if you are smart you will go over it one more time, just in case there is something you have missed.
